

General Knowledge

Modern History

STUDY NOTES

Expansion of British East India Company -
Anglo-Mysore Wars

Anglo - Mysore Wars

Mysore

- Mysore with the battle of Talikota, The Vijayanagar Empire came to an end. • Mysore was ruled by a Hindu king of Wodeyar dynasty
- Hyder Ali was appointed the faujdar of Dindigul in 1755. With the help of French, he established a modern Armory in 1755.
- In 1760, He was defeated by Marathas but after the defeat of Marathas in the battle of Panipat, he regained his power. Within a short span of time he made Mysore one of the leading Indian powers, modernized the army and expanded his kingdom through conquests.
- He was strong enough to emerge as a rival of the British. Sultan Tipu, who ruled Mysore till his death at the hands of the British in 1799, was a man of complex character.
- He showed a keen interest in the French Revolution. He planted a Tree of Liberty at Srirangapatam and he became a member of a Jacobin Club.
- After defeating and killing Tipu in 1799, they were surprised to find that the Mysore peasant was much more prosperous than the peasant in British occupied Madras.

Anglo-Mysore Wars

- The aggressive designs of Hyder alarmed other contemporary powers. The English, the Marathas and the Nizam all were affected by his hostile attitude and thus declared him as their common enemy.
- The Marathas, being more powerful, defeated Hyder and captured some portions of his territory.
- On the other hand the Nizam and Warren Hastings entered into an agreement to combine their forces to fight against Hyder. But the Nizam, apprehending danger from Hyder's side, remained neutral.

First Anglo-Mysore War (1767 - 1769)

- The British, along with Nizams of Hyderabad & the Marathas declared war on Mysore.
- Hyder Ali was able to bring the Marathas and the Nizam to his side with skillful diplomacy.
- But the British under General Smith defeated Ali in 1767.
- His son Tipu Sultan advanced towards Madras against the English
- In 1769, the Treaty of Madras was signed which brought an end to the war.

- The conquered territories were restored to each other.
- It was also agreed upon that they would help each other in case of a foreign attack.

Second Anglo-Mysore War (1780 - 1784)

- Hyder Ali forged an alliance with the Nizam and the Marathas and defeated the British forces in Arcot.
- Hyder Ali died in 1782 and therefore the war was continued by his son Tipu Sultan.
- Sir Eyre Coote, who had earlier defeated Hyder Ali many times, ended the war

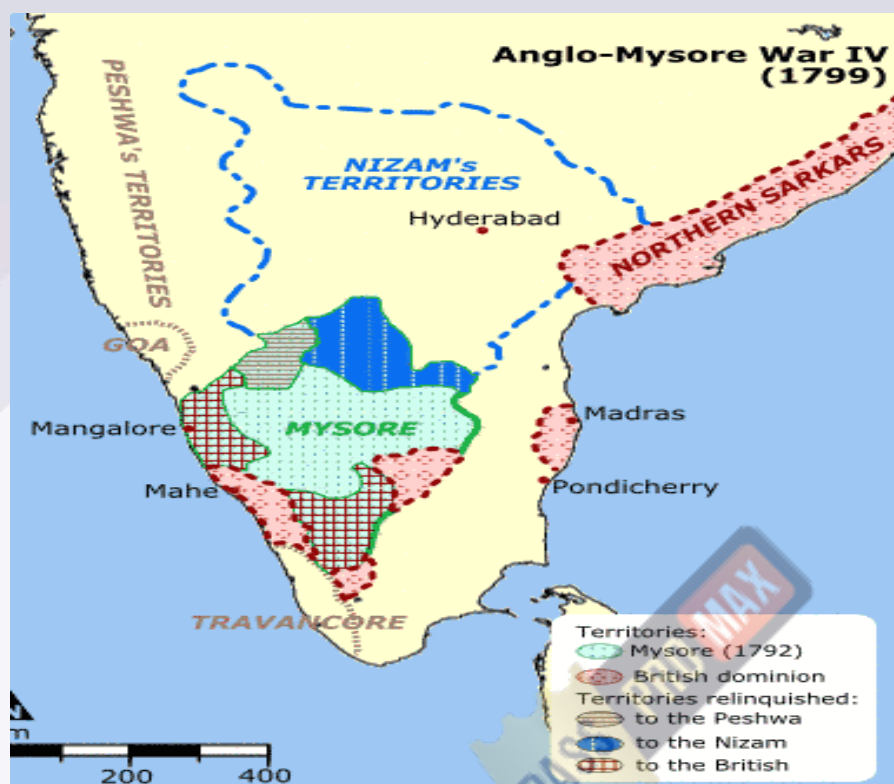

Third Anglo-Mysore War (1786-92)

- Tipu Sultan, who assumed control of Mysore, had French help in bettering his military resources.
- He also refused to free the English prisoners taken during the second Anglo-Mysore war as per the Treaty of Mangalore.
- Tipu declared war on Travancore in 1789. Travancore was a friendly state of the British.
- The Governor-General of Bengal, Lord Cornwallis declared war on Tipu in 1790. • Tipu was defeated in the first phase of the war and his forces had to retreat.
- Later the English advanced towards Tipu's capital of Seringapatam and Tipu had to bargain for peace.
- The war ended with the Treaty of Seringapatam in 1792.

- As per the treaty, Tipu had to cede half of his kingdom to the English including the areas of Malabar, Dindigul, Coorg and Baramahal.
- He also had to pay Rs.3 Crore as war indemnity to the British

Fourth Anglo-Mysore War (1799)

- The Treaty of Seringapatam failed to bring peace between Tipu and the English.
- Tipu also refused to accept the Subsidiary Alliance of Lord Wellesley
- Tipu aligned with the French which the British saw as a threat. The Marathas and the Nizam invaded from the North.
- The British secured a decisive victory at the Battle of Seringapatam in 1799.
- Tipu died while defending the city.
- Tipu's territories were divided between the British and the Nizam of Hyderabad.
- The core area around Seringapatam and Mysore was restored to the Wodeyar dynasty and thus they became the de-facto ruler.
- British resident was placed at the Mysore Court. Mysore entered into a Subsidiary Alliance with the British
- The Kingdom of Mysore remained a princely state not directly under the British until 1947

War	Duration	Key Figures	Cause	Outcome	Treaty
First Anglo-Mysore War	1767-1769	Hyder Ali (Mysore), British East India Company	Mysore's growing power, British fear of French alliance	Stalemate; Mysore retained independence	Treaty of Madras (1769)
Second Anglo-Mysore	1780-1784	Hyder Ali, Tipu Sultan (Mysore), British alliance with Marathas and	British alliance with Marathas and	Inconclusive, both sides incurred heavy	Treaty of Mangalore (1784)

War		British East India Company	Nizam against Mysore	losses
Third Anglo-Mysore War	1790–1792	Tipu Sultan (Mysore), Lord Cornwallis (British)	Tipu's attack on Travancore, British defense of allies	Mysore lost significant territory to British allies	Treaty of Seringapatam (1792)
Fourth Anglo-Mysore War	1798–1799	Tipu Sultan (Mysore), Lord Wellesley (British)	Tipu's alliance with the French, seen as threat by British	Mysore defeated; Tipu Sultan killed; Mysore annexed	No formal treaty; annexation